I wish to express my deep sincerity and thanks for the kindnesses you have shown me through all the leaders of different groups throughout the tour from which I have recently returned home. I believe much good will in time come out of it. Perhaps it will take a little time to digest some of the things I have brought forth, although much has already begun to show itself, according to reports we are getting from here and there.

The question has arisen from some quarters that I have thrown the whole thing into a materialistic concept with little of the spiritual nature. The truth is that the labels are the cause of confusion, for could there be material conditions without the spiritual? Could a man be a man without the spirit supporting him? Call it what you will by labels, it still does not mean anything. But the manifestation of what is termed "material" nature is before us everywhere. Can one separate the breath from his body and still maintain his body as an active unit? Of course not! Neither can you separate the one from the other, either way. So if it is properly understood, and reality must be faced sooner or later, then one must admit that I conveyed both as a unit in one.

Unless we face reality as it really is, and not keep on perpetuating the people of other worlds as holy people and ourselves as the devils, we shall accomplish very little in realizing what is happening. And we shall find ourselves in just as much of a mystery 50 years from now as we are at the moment, regardless how many contacts or sightings may take place in the meantime. How long would one live as a physical being if he lived on spiritual bread and never ate of material bread?

People who wish to live in a mystical fog, I do believe, have a perfect right to do so, but I for one want a clear concept of life that I might live it fully as it was intended by my Creator. One thing is definite, without a question of any doubt, most people want to separate that which the Creator never meant to be separated, thereby passing judgment upon the Creator that His creation is wrong, since they disregard the holiness of nature, which is His handiwork, and only honor that which created it. But how can one honor the Master without honoring His house? If a man honor Him and not His house, then he is "telling Him that he loves Him or honors Him but cannot honor His house which was created out of His own mind. So what is really being done but displaying hypocrisy? Such a one pretends to love the Master yet hates His creation.

This realization is all I tried to bring to the people in relation to the dangers and people of other worlds, that it is all a reality...as real as they and our world are...that all is one and there is no two. One cannot love one half of himself and hate the other half.

Unless this is realized and lived as such, I am afraid that all efforts of the present and future will be of no avail, but a continuation of confusion, sorrow and pain, with eventual destruction. What else can a decaying element bring but annihilation of that which was once part of itself? So if the people have misunderstood, or didn't want to receive it that way, then they didn't want Reality, and I for one will not lend myself to false pictures, or false promises. Who am I to separate that which God has put together because I do not understand His purpose? The best I can do is to learn the purpose and then I will not desire divisions or to judge my Creator.

I suppose you have read all the reports about my visit in Holland and Zurich. It just goes to show how far the opposition will go to keep its old system going. Regardless what the public read, which was not the truth, the leaders themselves now have a little prestige, for this is the first time a Queen has asked to be told something about them. And regardless how small or how large the nation may be, a King or a Queen of such a nation carries more prestige than any President. The opposition did not like to see this happen. That is why the uproar.

Speaking of the opposition, I surely ran into a hornet's nest in Zurich, for that is where the headquarters really are. So it is good that things happened as they did, otherwise we would never have known who is opposing what and why. It didn't hurt me one bit. In fact, publicity was given me that I never would have received in any other way. To all of the hundreds of people who were turned away during my tour, no publicity of this kind was given, or even mention of them has been forthcoming anywhere other than occasionally in local papers. But when the
